About the Concert

Tradition, Tradition!

I'm reminded tonight of the band directors that have walked this concert hall before me; Dennis Johnson, John Fannin, Gerald L. Welker, David A. Wells, Roger Reichmuth, Paul Shahan, and RW "Doc" Farrell.

Tonight, we celebrate the beginning of something new, not the end of something old. Past, Present, Future was no accident, but something on my mind when I was hired for this job. It is rare for two collegiate band faculty to share a wall for twenty-four years as John and Dennis did, and I'm fortunate to have spent the last two years in the care and company of them both. Their tradition of excellence and commitment to creating art in Western Kentucky is to be valued, upheld, and celebrated. Tonight, we do just that.

We open the concert with Director of Bands Emeritus, Mr. Dennis Johnson, conducting one of the masterworks in the canon of wind music; Toccata Marziale by English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams. Tocatta, meaning to touch, has an association with virtuosic keyboard players of the Baroque period, and this piece showcases every player on stage with technique and musicality. It has been such a privilege to have Dennis to lean on in the last two years and you can plan to see him on stage and in rehearsal for many, many years to come.

The repertoire of the wind ensemble is so vast and varied that it is impossible to showcase all in one concert. Tonight, we present a potpourri of works that offer different listening experiences for the audience member. Nicole Piuanno's Autumn Air is a slow, delicate piece for winds and percussion. While it is not the most technical piece on our program, the lyricism offers the players onstage an opportunity to demonstrate their commitment to art; work built upon the foundation started by many of you years ago. Patrick Dunnigan's transcription of The Danserye takes us back to the sixteenth century. Susato did not indicate the music specifically for any instrumentation, but rather "for any combination of wind and string instruments that might be available." We are joined on stage by Mr. Brent Webster, faculty, and his guitar studio tonight to showcase the possibilities of instrumental combinations and collaborations.

Mr. Fannin conducts the Symphonic Band in two pieces this evening. His own Legend of Bafe highlights his wit and imagination as a composer, and demonstrates his teaching and fineness with concert bands. Following which, they perform a lovely transcription of the Shostakovich Folk Dances. Across the country this piece is often reserved for the top band; but here at Murray State, we have committed studio faculty and depth not seen in other places of our size. I'm so proud of the students' work, and Mr. Fannin's wonderful teaching.

We would not be who we are, and where we are, without the work of alumni years ago, and their support in the many years to come. I hope you'll find yourself at home this weekend, just as you did years ago, and know that we will look forward to your frequent return in the years to come.

Thank you for being here with us this evening.
